Good morning! It's Katie, from 831 and I'm here this Talk a lot Tuesday on behalf of the SEAL team.

Did you know that today is National Wright Brothers Day? Yes, a day to celebrate the Wright brothers, Orville and Wilbur. On this day, in 1903, near Kitty Hawk, North Carolina, the first ever plane in history flew. Despite only flying 12 seconds before crashing, this marked the beginning of a new, more efficient model of transportation.

Similar to this, as students we can work hard and persevere. It may not be the same, with the same efforts or motives as the Wright brothers, but they serve as a good example of hard workers. Making the world's first plane was not an easy task, but Orville and Wilbur carried it out anyway. Some may say it was a waste of time and material because it crashed so soon, but a better way to see it is as a start. The plane being in the air for a mere 12 seconds inspired others to try, while also motivating others to continue, knowing there is hope.

Like this, we should never give up, and take each failure as one step closer to success.

Thanks for listening and have a Try-Hard Tuesday 😊
